NSL's eyes and ears to support local searches for a missing child

Every second counts, so I'm really pleased such a large number of colleagues have registered

Paul Abbott
Senior Civil Enforcement Officer

- > Through a company-wide initiative to encourage and harness ideas from staff members, NSL's frontline workers have been able to do more for their local communities
- > By submitting his idea to the My Contribution scheme, Paul Abbott, a Senior Civil Enforcement Officer, was able connect his company's frontline workers with Child Rescue Alert, a system that triggers an alert via SMS or email when a child has gone missing nearby
- > Recognising the importance of Child Rescue Alerts, Paul Abbott has played a central role in encouraging colleague's right across the UK to register for the alerts, with his efforts already resulting in a significant increase in the number of people registered

Paul's suggestion is an example of just show how much our Civil Enforcement teams care for the wellbeing of their local communities and I'm delighted his enthusiasm for such an important programme is shared by colleagues all over the country.

It's particularly pleasing that such a simple but effective idea has been prompted by our call for new ideas and the foresight and dedication of an individual member of staff. In this case, it's no exaggeration to say that everyone who registers for alerts could help to save a child's life.

Mark Hoskin
Executive Director of Local Government

Child Rescue Alert is the national system that alerts people to high risk child disappearances, managed by the charity Missing People, the National Crime Agency and technology company Groupcall.
